

SHALL WE CALL IT M'CALL?

There may be nothing in a name, but Mark Bates, editor of the Payette Lake Star at McCall, entertains a different opinion on the subject. He has asked the public utilities commission to determine upon a name for the town in which he is now located. McCall stands at the south end of Payette lake. When the Oregon Short Line built into the town a few years ago it gave the village it found there the name of Lakeport. According to Mr. Bates the railroad's action has brought much confusion and he wants the town to shake one of its names. He has requested that the commission determine whether the town will be known as McCall or Lakeport.
